P R E F A C E.

THE late acts of the Legislature relating to the regulation of Attorneys, renders a complete List of such as have obtained the regular Certificate at this time a circumstance of great utility, not only to Gentlemen of the Profession, but to Society at large.

It is not the desire of the Editor to detract from the merit of former publications of this nature; but, where an evident superiority is given him from a channel of information not open to every one, he may surely claim the preference which will arise from the accuracy such information affords.

The Law List hitherto published, has been collected from the books kept at the Master's Office in the King's Bench, and the Clerk of the Warrants in the Common Pleas, a channel which, although it may at first view carry with it every appearance of authenticity, is nevertheless subject to error; for Gentlemen who are at all acquainted with the books kept for the purpose of entering the names and places of abode of Attorneys, must have observed the alteration of residences, and the deaths which happen in the course of a year, produce great uncertainty.

It is true, the Editor of the former Law List has used every endeavour to correct succeeding publications from private information; but this has often destroyed the effect it was meant to produce, and afforded opportunities for impositions by the offer of names of persons for insertion who never were admitted Attorneys.

It may also be remarked, that numbers of the persons who have been from year to year continued among the names of Country Attorneys, in the former List, are either dead or removed; and, in short, although it was in some instances useful, it was in none certain of giving accurate information. This want of authenticity was not perhaps to be remedied until the passing of the late act of parliament, under which the annual Certificates of Attorneys having paid the duty, are delivered out at the Stamp Office; and in consequence of the correct register there kept, the Editor of the present List is enabled to shew with accuracy the name and residence of every practising Attorney in England, and to make those annual corrections which a change of circumstances will render necessary.

It must be presumed that all such as mean to practise, will by no means omit complying with the terms of the late act of parliament: if they do so, they practise subject to the penalties inflicted by it.

The Editor of the present LAW LIST forbears attempting to add any other information than the names and residence of the Attorneys in Town and Country: this his situation fully enables him to do; because, if the names are omitted in the official books from which his List is taken, such omission must arise from the neglect of the parties to qualify themselves; and as in that case they cannot legally practise, their names being inserted in a publication of this nature, would be rather calculated to mislead than inform.

Should any future period afford him such information as may be perfectly relied on, the Editor will cheerfully embrace any other subject that may be of utility to the Profession. At present he only presumes to offer that to the Public, which sanctioned by the Honorable the Commissioners of His Majesty's Stamp Duties, and being communicated through the immediate channel of the Office he has the honour to hold under them, in the department to which it relates, must, for these reasons, claim an authenticity to which other publications will not be entitled.

JOHN HUGHES.
